Jane and Ted are talking about an endangered animal.

Jane: Wow, listen to this. Tigers are endangered. There are only 3,200 of them left in the world today.

Ted: Really?

Jane: Yes. In the 1900s, there were more than 100,000 tigers.

Ted: Wow! Why are there only 3,200 now?

Jane: Because some people kill tigers. They sell them for their fur of to make medicine.

Ted: That’s terrible!

Jane: I know. But some people are trying to help them.

Ted: Maybe we can help them, too.

Jane: We can. Learning about tigers is the best way to start.

LOW-TECH TRIBES

Could you live without a computer or a cell phone? It can be hard for you to imagine a life without technology. But many people live happily without it.

The Maasai

The Maasai people of Kenya, in Africa, are one of the most famous tribes on the planet. The Maasai are nomadic. This means they do not live in one place all the time. They move from place to place and make new homes each time they move. They build their homes in the forests from things they can find in nature—mud, sticks, grass, and rocks. Their villages do not have running water or electricity.

The Hmong

The Hmong people of Southeast Asia live in parts of Thailand, Laos, and Vietnam. They have their own language and their own way of life. They live the same way now that their ancestors lived 2,000 years ago. You won’t find much technology in a Hmong village.

The Koryak

The Koryak people live in Russia, on the Northern part of the Pacific Coast. The land is Arctic tundra, which is very cold. For food, these people catch fish or herd reindeer. Koryak children usually cook food for their family. Koryak people wear warm hats made of reindeer skins.
